New Collaborative Learning Hub in the Library

If you come down to the library today, you’re in for a big surprise. The Library Collaborative Learning Hub is now open for business!

Located on the entrance level of the Central Library, the Learning Hub is a vibrant and flexible space for students to use for study, learning and collaboration.

The Hub has been designed to provide a range of technology for group and individual study, placed in a comfortable and inviting social space for students, and a combined service desk to offer library and IT support from a single area.

The creative design of the Hub provides a variety of group and individual study spaces. The new enhanced study facilities include:

- Comfortable casual seating in a light and spacious environment
- Group study areas where students can work together on group projects
- Areas for laptop use and wireless facilities
- A hub for printing and photocopying
- A new Adaptive Technology Room
- A combined service desk
- A closed Reserve collection behind the service desk.

The hub has been equipped with 41 computers, 5 workstations configured for group study, 10 study pods with individual workstations and 24 casual seating areas. There is a laptop bench with provision for up to 10 laptops, and wireless access to the internet is available for laptops and handheld devices. Students can use the 2 scanners provided to scan documents or pictures for assignments. In the printing and photocopying hub, students can use 2 B&W printers, 3 B&W photocopiers, and a combined colour printer/photocopier.

The group study workstations are fitted with large flat screen PCs where a group of up to 5 students can work together on an assignment or presentation. This is meeting the growing demand from students for more group work spaces, and supports the shift towards group activities in teaching and learning.

Near the windows are 24 comfortable lounge chairs and coffee tables where students and staff can use laptops, read or study. The Current Periodicals collection is nearby so that you can browse the latest issue of your favourite journal in a pleasant environment.

Earlier this year the Vice-Chancellor’s Committee identified preparation for the Research Quality Framework (RQF) as Flinders Overall Priority 1 for 2007. The University has established an RQF Project Steering Committee to oversee the project. The University Librarian is a member of the Steering Committee. Several Working Groups have also been established: the RQF Reference Group; the Data Capture and Repositories Working Group; and the Impact Working Group. Each of these Working Groups include a Library representative.

Not surprisingly the RQF is also the Library’s top priority for 2007. We have established an RQF Planning Group to co-ordinate our RQF activities and library staff are busy preparing the Library’s contribution to this important project.

The Library is working in partnership with the Office of Research to develop the infrastructure and workflow processes that will be necessary to underpin the University’s participation in the RQF.

The Australian Government’s Department of Education, Science and Training (DEST) is responsible for co-ordinating the implementation of the RQF across the university sector. One of the key elements in DEST’s planning is that each university is expected to have a digital repository which will hold selected research outputs of researchers included in nominated Research Groups. Flinders is fortunate to have already established a digital repository: the Flinders Academic Commons (FAC). This was initially developed as a collaborative project by the Library and the School of Humanities. The FAC will provide the framework for the University’s RQF repository. However it will need to be upgraded and developed further to meet DEST requirements. Links between the repository, Research Master and the DEST RQF information system will also need to be established.

In addition to managing and supporting the repository, library staff will also assist with populating the repository with appropriate research outputs. This will entail:

- searching for full text digital versions of articles in journals databases
- creating links for these and lodging them in the repository
- obtaining digital versions of journal articles through our Document Delivery Service
- scanning print versions for which no digital document exists
- ensuring that all digital documents are in an appropriate format for the repository

Library staff will also provide appropriate metadata for all items deposited in the repository. Some of this metadata will be available from Research Master but will need to be verified and updated before being migrated to the repository. Other metadata will be located or created by library staff.

We have made a good beginning, but there is still much to be done!
The previous space, which housed the Reserve, Reference, Current Periodicals and Newspapers collections, has been opened up to make full use of the available natural light. The existing collections have been relocated elsewhere on Level 1 of the Library. The increasing use of eReserve to make material available to students online has allowed the library to significantly reduce the Reserve print collection. This collection is now a closed collection and students need to come to the loans desk to borrow Reserve items.

The new combined service desk has brought together a number of different services – Loans, Information, FLO Support and ID Cards - in the one general area to make it easier for students to receive assistance.

The Hub also includes a new Adaptive Technology room for students who need to use adaptive equipment such as JAWS, Zoomtext or Dragon Dictate. This room is close to the desk so that library staff are available to assist students if required.

Come and have a look around the next time you visit the library. We welcome questions or comments about the Hub.

At the combined service desk, students can:
- Get assistance with FLO, email & password problems
- Ask for information and support in using the library’s print & online resources
- Borrow books, Reserve material, headphones & USB drives
- Get their student ID card
- Sign up for access to the 24/7 computer lab.

In the Hub, students can:
- Search online databases
- Use Flinders Learning Online
- Watch their lectures online using Media Player or Quicktime
- Print, photocopy or scan documents
- Use their laptop or PDA to access the wireless network
- Work on group projects with a shared computer.

In the Hub, students can:
- Enjoy a comfortable & relaxing social space
- Browse through the latest articles from their favorite journal
- Sit in a comfy sofa chair to wait for friends, read a book or use their laptop
- Use adaptive technology in a pleasant environment with nearby support.
I am a graduate of Flinders. 2007 is the thirtieth anniversary of my commencement in a BA (majoring in History and Politics.)

I then worked for a couple of periods between 1981 and 1987 as Research Assistant with American Studies partly focusing on the Bourke/DeBats analysis of 19th Century urban social and political data.

I qualified as a librarian in the late ‘80s as a way of enhancing job opportunities in rural SA where I was living. Initially as a librarian I was employed in joint-use TAFE and public libraries. I thoroughly enjoyed working with adult students in TAFE (particularly women returning to study) and this led me to complete a Graduate Diploma in Education (Education and Training of Adults).

A re-embracing of urban life enabled me to take up an appointment as Adelaide Theological Librarian with the Adelaide College of Divinity (ACD). This began a very satisfying and complex nine years of providing a library service for three churches and to both vocational and higher education students. By virtue of the various arrangements between the ACD and Flinders, I happily renewed an association with my Alma Mater.

My appointment at Flinders University Library has brought me into the thick of adult learning! I am enjoying the shift from small library management to a team liaising with a large group of students and faculty. The current challenge is to get to grips with a diverse range of topics across the Social Studies disciplines for which I am responsible. These include: Ageing Studies, Business Economics, Commerce, Economics, Psychology, Sociology and Women’s Studies.

Away from the job, I enjoy swimming and walking with a regular coterie of companions. I am continuing informal studies in (Koine) Greek with the ACD. Recreational reading is also an important part of my life. I love biographies and recent books include Mandy Sayer’s Velocity, Graham Freudenberg’s A Figure of Speech and Madhur Jaffrey’s Climbing the Mango Trees (complete with Indian recipes). Christmas gifts have introduced me to the joys of American poetry, notably Billy Collins’ The Trouble with Poetry and Jane Kenyon’s Otherwise.

Under the terms of the Agreement the libraries will:

• exchange information on the development of our digital repositories
• provide inter-library loans of print publications held by the libraries
• share information on the development of innovative library services
• provide staff development opportunities for library staff with a staff exchange program.

The Collaborative Agreement is the culmination of a series of joint activities by the two libraries in recent years. Both universities are members of the International Network of Universities (INU) and both libraries participate in the INU Special Interest Group for University Libraries. In addition to Flinders and Hiroshima, other university libraries in this Special Interest Group are La Trobe University Library, Malmo University Library, the University of Leicester Library and James Madison University Library. The Special Interest Group is exploring a number of collaborative projects including:

• benchmarking
• conference collaboration
• digital repositories for research outputs
• staff exchanges

In November 2006 Hiroshima University Library hosted an international conference on staff development. Flinders University Library was invited to present a paper on our innovative trainee librarian program. One of our librarians, Liz Walkley Hall, who was initially appointed as trainee librarian in 1994, attended the conference and presented a paper on staff development in Australian university libraries.

Flinders University Library and Hiroshima University Library recently signed a Collaborative Agreement to facilitate co-operation between the two libraries.

Bill Cations, University Librarian (centre) meets with Professor Kunio Itoh, Director of Hiroshima University Library (right) and other senior managers.
From the beginning of 2007 the Library has made most former 1 and 3 day loan books into 7 day loans. Following a detailed analysis of comments in the ‘Rodski’ user satisfaction survey regarding the difficulties that 1 and 3 day loans caused students, the Library Advisory Committee decided on this change to the management of books used in topics. All branches except Law undertook this conversion.

A considerable number of extra copies were purchased to ensure that levels of accessibility would be maintained and future acquisition will aim to continue this level of accessibility. At the same time a single extension for 7 day loans, where no other user has placed a hold on the item, was approved. This means that students will be able to keep topic books that are not in high demand for 14 days.

These changes should improve access to books used in topics and the comments from students have been positive thus far. The impact of these changes will be carefully monitored.

New Associate Librarian Catherine Brown

Catherine Brown has recently joined the Library, in the position of Associate Librarian (Information Infrastructure and Resources). Catherine is responsible for leading and managing the Information Infrastructure and resources Division which includes Library Information Technology Services; the Flinders University digital repository; the acquisition, maintenance and metadata provision of library print and electronic collections; Document Delivery Services and the Universities’ Research Repository South Australia.

Prior to her role at Flinders, Catherine held the position of Manager, Library Resources and Technologies at the University of the Sunshine Coast, Queensland, which she joined as a foundation library staff member in 1996.

Catherine’s professional interests include the development and monitoring of technologies and systems to enable effective delivery of information resources; print and electronic collection development; library design and architecture, and staff professional development.

Catherine is located at the Central Library and can be contacted by email catherine.brown@flinders.edu.au or phone 8201 2777.
Legal History Resources Boosted

SA legal history students and scholars will soon have access to a valuable new research resource. A searchable fulltext database of early South Australian legislation is to be developed.

Professor David Clark of the School of Law and Helen Culshaw, Flinders Law Librarian have jointly been awarded a grant from the Law Foundation of South Australia, an institution affiliated with the Law Society of South Australia. The Foundation supports approved initiatives relating to legal education and research. By virtue of the grant, the database will be compiled and launched during 2007.

The Flinders Law Library was established in 1991, and a good collection of print and electronic legal resources is now in place. However, despite a continuing search, it has not been possible to collect a full set of SA Acts and Ordinances. For a South Australian legal research collection, this is a particularly serious issue. The present print set of the Acts and Ordinances held by the Law Library is, prior to 1880, comprised of fragile original volumes, and poor quality photocopies. It has been difficult for staff and students to undertake legal history research with this set. Soon, because of the poor physical condition of the set, it would be impossible. There are approximately ten complete or almost complete sets in existence. None of these are easily accessible to Flinders staff and students. The other extant sets are also quite fragile.

Legislation for the period under discussion is not available electronically, and the Attorney General has given permission for the Law Library to create the digital copies of the legislation. Now, with receipt of this grant, a complete print set of the legislation 1837 to 1880 will be temporarily brought together by borrowing volumes from other South Australian Law Libraries. The acts will be copied and digitised, metadata for key terms added and a chronological index will be included.

The database will be mounted as a community on Flinders Academic Commons and thus be accessible via the internet not only to Flinders staff and students, but to the public at large.

It is planned to offer the data to the national legal database AUSTLII to further enhance its use, and to contribute generally to resources for legal research.

Lippincott Williams & Wilkins Journal Legacy Archive

The LWW Journal Legacy Archive provides access to the backfiles of more than 200 journals that have, over the years, chronicled important breakthroughs in research and techniques in major clinical and medical specialties, including nursing, infectious disease, surgery, and cardiology. Coverage of each journal spans Volume 1, Issue 1 through the final issue of 1999.

For a list of titles in this collection go to: http://www.ovid.com and enter “Journal Legacy Archive” in the site search box.

Informit upgrade

Informit is an online service offering a wide range of database products that deliver the vast majority of Australasian scholarly research to the education, research and business sectors. Until recently Flinders had access to a limited number of the Informit databases but our subscription has now been upgraded to the Complete service. This provides additional full text content in A+Education (100+ education journals), Meditext (100+ medical journals) and Informit e-Library (200+ cross discipline titles) as well as additional Index databases eg. SAGE (Science and Geography Education). An added benefit to users is that this package also gives unrestricted usage in place of the limited number of concurrent users in the past. This should solve the problem of turnaways when the database is in heavy demand.

For access go to: http://www.lib.flinders.edu.au/go/informit

Elsevier backfiles

A number of Elsevier backfile packages have recently been purchased by the Library. These include: Agricultural and Biological Sciences, Engineering and Technology, Medicine and Dentistry and Computer Science. Full text access via ScienceDirect to all titles within these packages from 1994 back to volume 1, issue 1 is now available.

Ulrich’s Periodicals Directory

Ulrich’s Periodicals Directory™ is a bibliographic database providing detailed, comprehensive, and authoritative information on serials published throughout the world. It covers all subjects, and includes publications that are published regularly or irregularly and are circulated free of charge or by paid subscription. Ulrich’s remains the global source for periodicals information since 1932.

Nature publications

Three new Nature Publishing Group titles were recently added to the Library’s online collection. These are Nature nanotechnology, Nature photonics and Nature physics.

Stat!Ref electronic books

A number of titles in the STAT!Ref® collection are now accessible online in a cross-searchable, healthcare reference that integrates core titles with evidence-based resources and innovative tools.

The following titles are available:

AAFP conditions A to Z
Adams and Victor’s principles of neurology
Basic & clinical pharmacology
Diagnostic and statistical manual of mental disorders (DSM-IV-TR)
Emergency medicine : a comprehensive study guide
Fitzpatrick’s color atlas and synopsis of clinical dermatology
Goodman & Gilman’s the pharmacological basis of therapeutics
Review of medical physiology
